Muse announce Downtown in Business linkup

One of the UK's leading urban regenerators, Muse Developments, has announced a linkup with private-sector lobbying group and networking organisation, Downtown in Business (DIB).

Downtown's membership represents a diverse range of sectors and brings together ambitious SMEs and some of the biggest companies in the UK. DIB works in partnership with many public-sector agencies and organisations including the Bank of England, Local Enterprise Partnerships, local authorities the UK Space Agency and many other government departments.

As part of the partnership, Muse will work together with the DIB team on a range of opportunities in the coming months to promote the importance of repurposed regeneration in urban locations that creates vibrant, diverse and connected communities full of amenities, but importantly how everyone across the built environment must come together to address the climate crisis and develop more sustainably.

Phil Mayall, board director at Muse Developments, said: "Downtown in Business is one of the most successful and respected membership organisations with real clout in the sector and we're delighted to join their membership.

"As a sector, we're at a crucial moment in time where the public and private sector need to work together for the long term to drive investment, opportunity and prosperity right into the hearts of our communities, through the delivery of sustainable developments that'll stand the test of time and our partnership with DIB will provide a perfect platform to deliver this message."

Frank McKenna, CEO at Downtown in Business, said: "We are delighted to be working with Muse Developments and very much look forward to getting started with Phil and the team"
