Muse launches new manufacturing and logistics park

More than 30 property agents from across the East and West Midlands attended the launch of at Nottinghamshire's newest manufacturing and logistics park.

Representatives from the region's leading property firms attended a guided tour of Harrier Park at Hucknall, which is just minutes from the M1 and perfectly situated to accommodate a range of new and existing businesses.

The new 70 acre manufacturing and logistics park, which when complete will create around 2,000 new jobs, will be delivered by Muse Developments in partnership with Rolls-Royce, which is investing considerably in its existing manufacturing plant adjacent to the new development.

Dan Needham, development director at Muse, said: "We were delighted with the number of agents who attended our launch event at Harrier Park.

"Feedback on the site was very inspiring – with attendees saying they were impressed with our plans, the location and the potential for growth that it offers.

"It is now full steam ahead with construction on site. We are working closely with Nottinghamshire County Council who are currently delivering a new access road to Harrier Park from the Hucknall bypass."

Mr Needham added that his team had already received considerable interest from potential occupiers and hoped to be able to announce the first confirmed occupier within the next few months.

“We’ve received many enquiries about the park already and we are confident occupiers will be attracted by potential Harrier Park offers for economic growth both regionally and nationally,” added Dan.

The commencement of construction at Harrier Park marks a significant step forward for Hucknall. The wider development scheme incorporates housing, a new primary school and environmental enhancements.

Construction of the new business park access commenced in May 2016 and is due for completion by spring 2017.
